Report of Operative G T Purdy

Sept. 12th, 1926

Re: Jane Gibson

Operative went to Hoboken today to interview Mr. Messingkop at 506 Bloomfield St. in an effort to obtain some further information regarding the arrest of May Ray and Rose Gleitzman. He stated that he is quite certain that May Ray was arrested for having stolen property in her possession and that Freese Frances bailed her out for $500. That Detective Weinthal arrested the Ray woman and he arrested Rose Gleitzman. That he believes the Gleitzman woman got 90 days, but he cannot remember what happened to the Ray woman. He gave me the name of Mr. Nelson and said he could be found at the Elysian Camera Club at 307 Washington St.

I went to that address and located Mr. Nelson, who was the Captain of Detectives at the time of this arrest. I mentioned the arrest and the names in this case, but he does not seem to remember it and stated that he may be able to refresh his memory if I get the record from Headquarters. Mr. Nelson is a man about 80 years of age.

Operative then went to the vicinity of 602 - 1st St. and interviewed James Verbeyst, a cigar manufacturer located at this address; who stated that he and his family have been living in that house since 1894 and that he remembers a man and woman named Ray who lived in the house on the first floor left with a couple named Williams. They remembered that Mrs. Ray played the banjo and Mr. Ray the piano and were known to be music hall singers and made a lot of noise in their apartment, and finally sold their furniture and broke up as the Williams' had a quarrel. They were known to have moved from Haliday St., Jersey City to this address. The Verbeyst family could give no further information regarding this family as the tenants never mingle with their neighbors. Mr.
